DAILY TRIBUNE.

Review of Business for the past Year.

The following hints and statements (in Hunt's Magazine,) are much worthy of attention. Mr. Hunt's stand point is one of great responsibility, and he can do much to throw in guarding and guiding elements into the intensely working leaven of our commerce. He says:

We have formerly had seasons of expansion, when nominal fortunes have been reckoned in a multitude of lands; but never before since the first colonies were planted on our shores, has the country made such rapid strides in wealth upon a substantial basis. We know that this has not been unattended with danger, nor unaccompanied with great and sore evils. Genuine prosperity in its influence on the human heart is ever dangerous, and the stimulus which has produced such a sudden growth of wealth, like a rich covering upon a generous soil, must have given rank excess also to the tares growing with the wheat.—Nearly every State of the Union has at last felt the pestilential vapor planted on our shores, but
